

THE PRACTICE

What does this achieve?

Humility, Submission, Wisdom

This practice is not about asserting control over words or ideas, but about cultivating faith in the conversation itself—faith that when we "submit to one another out of reverence for Christ", something deeper than individual insight can emerge. We begin, as 2 Timothy 2 teaches, to "patiently endure," "correct with gentleness," and leave room for "God [to] grant them [or us!] repentance leading to a knowledge of the truth."

"Do nothing from selfish ambition or conceit, but in humility count others more significant than yourselves."
Philippians 2:3

"Submitting to one another out of reverence for Christ."
Ephesians 5:21

Reveal insights we could not have had on our own.

No one controls the outcome. Instead, we place faith in what can emerge when we listen together in love. As Proverbs 20:5 says, "The purpose in a man's heart is like deep water, but a man of understanding will draw it out."
This practice is a way of drawing out—not just others' words, but the meaning beneath them, even those meanings hidden from ourselves. The structure might seem constraining but it ends up liberating.

Light the spark

The structure of the practice is like bringing the kindling together for a fire. After one or two rounds, the conversation will have found itself, and you can now move into a richer, free-flowing conversation with a sense of trust and fellowship.

Practice

Like learning a new song or skill, this will feel "clunky" at first. You are training new muscles, so be patient with yourselves and others. A musician needs to know their instrument well before they can perform.

Part of an ecology

This practice is not to replace anything else, nor is it a 'silver bullet' to solve our problems. It should be integrated into our existing practices of Prayer, Preaching, Study, Worship, and Breaking Bread together so each can enrich and inform the others.

LISTENER

Ask the Speaker to pause intermittently so you can reflect.

“Everyone should be quick to listen, slow to speak and slow to become angry”
— James 1:19

ITS NOT A TEST!

You don’t have to memorize everything. Reflect back what you can; it will be useful for the speaker to understand what gets retained and what might need to be emphasized. Paraphrase where needed.

Notice any need to direct the conversation with phrases like:

“That reminds me of...”

“But what about...”

“Don’t you think that actually...”

Avoiding these strengthens your active listening muscles!

To effectively listen, follow these guidelines:

Empty yourself

Refrain from offering advice or solutions. Let the speaker lead the direction of their thoughts. Don’t make it about you or your experiences.

Start with what you remember

Reflect back the most relevant thing you hear rather than everything in order. You often end up remembering the rest afterward.

Be neutral

Listening does not mean agreeing, but equally try to put the listener at ease with your body language and tone. Reflect back without judgement.

Key Phrase:
“What I’m hearing you say is...”

SPEAKER

Make sure you pause to let the listener reflect.

ITS NOT WHAT YOU KNOW...

This is your chance to explore an idea; you don't have to start with a perfectly formed thesis. You can start at the "wrong" place and feel your way towards what makes more sense to you.

"If one gives an answer before he hears, it is his folly and shame."
— Proverbs 18:13

Practices like this often ask:

What is alive in you?

Regardless of the set topic, what is 'alive' might be something that happened yesterday, something about the environment you are in, or anything else. The practice is designed to start broad and circle in on what is most relevant to the group. What seems irrelevant might be the key to bringing the conversation 'find itself.'

To effectively share as the Speaker, follow these guidelines:

Listen to yourself

If you find you have nothing to say, you feel awkward or unsure of how you should start... this is exactly where you should start: let the listener repeat this back, see how it feels and what it gives space for.

Embrace Silence

Don't feel pressured to fill silences. Pauses are a natural part of reflecting and processing; allow them to happen without rushing to speak.

Say it out loud.

Saying it out loud might be the start you need for the next most relevant thing to emerge. Even if it seems tangential or irrelevant, it's part of the exploration.

Boundaries

Share only what you're comfortable with, and avoid oversharing anything highly emotional when starting out. Respect yourself and others, and it's okay to pass if needed.

SCRIBE

You will need a pen, paper & a timer/device.

ITS NOT A TRANSCRIPT

You don't have to capture everything. Focus on the insights and themes that emerge naturally. Trust that what's most important will surface.

"Let the wise listen and add to their learning, and let the discerning get guidance."
— Proverbs 1:5

Use the Non-Verbal Prompt Sheet

If you notice the session is turning into a regular conversation or feel the speaker might need to give way to the listener, tap the appropriate square on the sheet. You are also in charge of the timer; try to give a 30-second warning.

To effectively capture as the Scribe, follow these guidelines:

Plot the flow

Note down where the speaker started, what they moved onto next, and where they ended up.

What is unsaid

Notice any dynamics between the Speaker and Listener in terms of tone and body language. e.g. "At this point the speaker leaned forward" "The listener mirrored uncrossing their arms."

Feedback

At the end of the round, you will have a chance to briefly provide feedback on the flow of the Speaking and Listening and what unsaid things were noticed.

If you are the last Scribe from all the rounds, the group now moves into an unstructured free-flowing conversation having built up a sense of trust and shared understanding.

THE STRUCTURE

Check-In 2-3 mins total.

If necessary, briefly introduce yourselves and get comfortable. Start with prayer. Perhaps state why you are here and what you hope to get out of the session.

Pick a theme and starting roles

The theme could be a passage, a virtue like patience or faith, or an open inquiry into whatever is on each speaker's mind.

Set the timer.

The Scribe should keep the time. Pick a QR from below to start a timer.

2 min

3 min

5 min

Custom

3 Bells: Starting Bell, 30 Seconds Bell, Time Up Bell.

Feedback -3 mins total.

The Scribe feeds back after each round and the Listener states what they appreciated from what the Speaker said and also what feel remains unanswered.

This then sets up the next round where:

Listener becomes the Speaker.

Speaker becomes the Scribe.

Scribe becomes the Listener.

(A 4th rotating role of Observer can be added)

NON-VERBAL PROMPTS

Slow Down

Take your time, there's plenty of room for your thoughts.

Let the Listener
respond

Let the Speaker
direct the flow

30
Seconds Remaining

Place in the centre to be pointed at without breaking the flow of the session